

ABOUT CAREER COMMUNICATIONS GROUP, INC.

Career Communications Group, Inc. (CCG) was founded more than 20 years ago with a unique mission: To promote significant minority achievement in engineering, science, and technology. As a minority-owned talent management company providing diversity and leadership solutions to individuals and organizations, we recognize the mandate to promote excellence among our youth by telling the stories of the thousands of unheralded minority engineers, technologists, and scientists who are striving for success.

CCG publishes Hispanic Engineer & Information Technology magazine, US Black Engineer & Information Technology magazine, Science Spectrum magazine, and CCG's Women of Color Magazine. In addition to the National Women of Color Technology Awards Conference, held annually in Atlanta, Ga., CCG hosts the Science Spectrum Magazine Conference on Minorities in Research Science and the annual Black Engineer of the Year Awards Conference, now in its 19th year.

CCG is founder of three national public awareness/community empowerment campaigns: Black Family Technology Awareness Week, La Familia Technology Week, and the Native American Family Technology Journey, all sponsored by IBM Corporation. The purpose of these programs is to get minority-group families and communities focused on the urgent need for development in the field of technology.

Through our annual, national conferences; educational and public awareness programs; inspiring magazines; and other products and services, CCG reaches thousands of students and professionals each year. Through our continuous research and relationships we are able to strengthen communities, and the nation, by extending to people of color opportunities in the high-dollar-value fields of technology and science.
